Types of hair transplant at a glance

Which method is used depends on your hair loss, donor supply and goals. Your surgeon decides after examining you.

Method	How it works	Marks left	Often considered when
FUE	Follicles are extracted one at a time with a micro-punch and implanted.	Tiny dot marks in the donor area	Most men and women, shorter hairstyles, beard and eyebrow work
DHI	Follicles are extracted as in FUE and placed with an implanter pen that sets depth and angle.	Tiny dot marks in the donor area	Fine hairline detail and controlled density
FUT (strip)	A thin donor strip is removed, divided into grafts under magnification and implanted.	A fine linear scar	Cases needing many grafts where hair is worn longer; suitability decided on examination

Special areas

- Beard & moustache: fills patches and gaps along the natural direction of growth.
- Eyebrow: fine grafts placed at a low angle to rebuild shape and density.
- Female: density-focused planning that respects your natural pattern and parting.
- Repair: corrects an unnatural hairline, poor density, scars or misplaced grafts from an earlier procedure.

This guide is general information, not medical advice.

Are you a candidate?

A simple checklist. Only an examination can confirm suitability.

- ☐ Your hair loss pattern is stable or has been assessed by a doctor
- ☐ You have a healthy donor area (usually back and sides of the scalp)
- ☐ You are generally above 21 years of age
- ☐ You are in good general health
- ☐ Your expectations are realistic about density and coverage
- ☐ You can follow aftercare instructions for the first weeks

What affects the cost

- Number of grafts needed
- Technique used (FUE, DHI, FUT)
- Surgeon’s expertise and who performs each step
- Complexity, e.g. repair or scar correction
- Clinic location

At Bloom, transplant costs are commonly quoted in the range of about ₹30,000 to ₹1,50,000 or more. You receive a personalised estimate after your scalp assessment.

10 questions to ask any clinic

1. Who designs my hairline: the doctor or a technician?
2. Who performs extraction and implantation?
3. How many grafts do I realistically need, and why?
4. Which technique suits me, and what are the alternatives?
5. How much donor hair is available, and what is the safe limit?
6. What will the total cost include, and are there extra charges?
7. What marks will the donor area have?
8. What does recovery look like week by week?
9. What is the follow-up plan, and who do I contact with concerns?
10. Can I see before-and-after cases similar to mine, with the dates?
